BIO

The heart of my work is investigation concentrates around the postmodern condition of cities, contemporary urban planning & design paradigms. There the interest and focus is on New Urbanism, Contemporary Public Spaces, Creation of sustainable sound communities and neighborhoods and issues of concentrated poverty, social housing and aging society. My current interest centers on the understanding how urban experience is shaped by the urban form and the dynamic processes that compose our cities and places. Most of my courses include students from multiple disciplines, but mostly architecture, urban planning and urban design.
