BIO

My interest as a PhD fellow in Urban Planning and Design at KTH is directed to the use and design of public space, in particular green spaces and elements in the urban setting. After finishing my master's degree in urban planning and engineering I worked as a research assistant in regional planning and am now involved in the research project Urban Form and Social Behavior. My thesis is focusing on the roles and functions that are ascribed to urban green space and urban greenery and how these effect planning policy.
